Check out the First Generation by Chong Fah Cheong

📍 Singapore River, in front of the Fullerton Hotel

Commissioned by the Singapore Tourism Board for the People of the River series

Made up of a group of five boys jumping into the Singapore River, the sculpture shows the lighter side of everyday life around the river in the past. The river played a pivotal role in the history and development of Singapore. Children living in the riverbanks used to enjoy swimming in the river despite the pollution. This practice ceased with the completion of the colossal Clean Rivers project in 1983, where families, hawkers and bumboats were moved out of the area.

Homage To Newton by Salvador Dali

📍 UOB Plaza Atrium

In the 17th century, Sir Isaac Newton discovered the law of gravity. Legend tells us that the origin of this most important and fundamental physical law was initiated by the falling of an apple, represented in the present work by the ball falling from the right hand.

Salvador Dali, one of the most important surrealist artists, takes the liberty to go even further in paying homage to Newton by opening up the torso of the figure and suspending the heart to indicate "open-heartedness". The open head represents an "open-mind". These are two necessary qualities for the discovery of important natural laws as well as for success of all human endeavours.

Vitalità by Anna Chiara Spellini

📍 Outside UOB Plaza, along Singapore River

Vitalità reflects the vital energy of the universe known as 'qi'. Embodying the 'qi' in her visceral line of this sculpture, Anna Chiara Spellini has endowed the form of Vitalità with the vigour of being ready to move upward and forward. Commissioned by UOB, and part of the UOB Art Collection, Vitalità is a life force that creates newness, growth, good fortune and abundance for all.

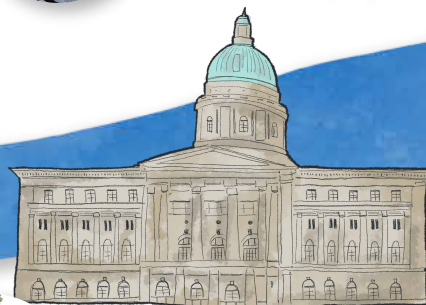

Bird by Fernando Botero

📍 Outside UOB Plaza, along Singapore River

The bird is traditionally associated with peace and serenity. This three-dimensional Bird by Botero also signifies the joy of living and the power of optimism.

Botero's sculpture allows one the pleasure of caressing reality. There is a sensual complicity that the artist has with his creation which is shared with the public.

National Gallery Singapore

Explore the 24 Hours in Singapore installation by Baet Yeok Kuan

📍 Lawn near Asian Civilisations Museum

Commissioned by the National Arts Council's Public Art Trust for Singapore's Jubilee

24 Hours in Singapore is an interactive audio sculpture installation that acts as an audio time capsule capturing the sounds of Singapore. With the passage of time, this sculpture will serve as a remembrance of the rich intangible heritage of our daily lives in Singapore circa 2015. The installation's audio recordings feature familiar sounds of everyday people, places, and scenes, from the sounds of traffic in suburban heartlands and MRT trains to the daily chatter in wet markets and coffee shops.
